

Commercial Litigation

The Irwin Fritchie commercial litigation group represents clients in matters ranging from complex commercial litigation to simple contractual disputes. Our experience ranges from securing preliminary relief, such as injunctions and restraining orders, to complex, multi-party litigation involving motion practice, discovery, trial, appeals, arbitration, mediation, and other types of alternative dispute resolution. Our attorneys have handled multimillion-dollar claims against vendors and subcontractors for violations of contractual agreements in a variety of forums.

While we aggressively represent our clients in litigation, we also recognize the importance of resolving disputes before our clients incur significant costs, and are sensitive to the fact that commercial disputes – unlike many other types of litigation – often have business implications that must be managed creatively to achieve a resolution that truly serves our clients' needs.
