Summer Associate Program

Irwin Fritchie is one of the few Louisiana law firms that hire both first- and second-year law students as summer associates. We receive resumé from students nationwide and conduct interviews both in our offices and on law school campuses. We seek students who share our enthusiasm for litigation and teamwork in order to provide them with opportunities to gain a better understanding their professional goals and how to achieve them.

The overall goal of the Irwin Fritchie Summer Associate Program is to hire summer associates we believe have the potential to become associates and long-term members of our firm. To this end, summer associates are given real-world assignments that range from legal research and writing memoranda to drafting motions and briefs. Our recruits are exposed to the practical aspects of litigation practice through attendance at depositions, client and expert meetings, mediations, court conferences, hearings, and trials. Unique to our summer associate program is the proactive training we provide, including a mock deposition course.

Teamwork is an integral part of our firm.
