Not a Basket Case-Case against Store Owner Dismissed After Plaintiff Fails

News

8.4.2015

Even when a store employee is at fault in causing an accident, a plaintiff must prove that his injuries were caused by the employee's conduct. It therefore is important that the store owner document each party's version of the incident, along with any available witnesses' version; have the involved employee describe the events of the accident; and document the customer's physical condition immediately after the incident occurs.
